STOLE A $10,000 OPINION.

The Widow of a Famous General Who Needed Money to Dress Well.

Some years ago the widow of a famous Union general was intimate with the wife and daughters of a justice of the supreme court and was as familiar with their home as with her own, which was in the immediate neighborhood. She was also intimate with the family of a prominent and popular lobbyist, who was supposed to represent Jay Gould, C. P. Huntington and other men of large interests whenever anything concerned them in congress. All the parties are now dead, except the lady in the case, whom I will call Mrs. Smith. She was a handsome, ambitious and frivolous woman, whose husband committed suicide by drowning himself in his bathtub. She lived a gay life afterward, but managed to keep many of her old friends. Knowing her love of money and the fact that her income did not keep pace with her expenses, the lobbyist told her that he would give her $10,000 if she could get him a copy of the opinion which the justice was expected to deliver in the supreme court on the following Monday, involving the constitutionality of the Thurman Pacific railroad law. He told her that he knew the opinion was in manuscript and believed that the judge had it locked up in the desk in his library.

Sunday morning, as soon as she saw the justice and his family start for church, she went across the street, around Thomas circle, rang the bell and told the servant that she wanted to look at a book in the justice's library. As she was accustomed to go about the house almost daily they thought nothing of it, and she was allowed to remain undisturbed in the same room with the decision for nearly two hours. It is supposed that she had a set of false keys, for the justice said that the opinion was locked up in his desk and could not have been reached otherwise. But at any rate the lobbyist is known to have obtained the opinion in advance, and the woman was shortly after able to pay off some pressing obligations. An investigation disclosed the facts I have stated, and it seemed to be the only possible way the opinion could have been obtained. Of course the incident terminated relations between the two families, and when the story got out about town Mrs. Smith found it more comfortable to rent her Washington residence and remove to New York.—Chicago Record.

DOCTOR WAS IN LUCK.

How He Got a Quarter of Beef He Was In Want Of.

A prosperous Pittsburg physician, who resides in an aristocratic part of the city, related an experience he met with about a year after he had graduated from college. He was practicing in a small village in Indiana county about 18 miles from any railroad. He had been recently married, and in the struggle to make ends meet the prospect at times became very discouraging. It was during one of these depressing periods in the middle of the winter, with snow a foot and a half deep covering the ground, that he was called to attend a farmer who lived some miles away. The stock of provisions in the house was exhausted, and it seemed certain that the resolution that had been made by the young couple not to ask any one for credit must be broken. When the call arrived, the doctor was preparing to go to the nearest store to ask the proprietor to give him "lick" so that he could get something for breakfast. Instead of going to the store he mounted his faithful mare Molly and started off through the drifts to visit his patient. When the doctor rose to leave, after attending to the patient, the old farmer said: "Doc, I ain't got no money, but if a quarter of beef'll do you any good I'll send it in when the roads get broke."

The young doctor's heart gave a bound. Concealing his exultation as best he could, he said: "What's the matter with me taking it right along? I was thinking of buying some beef, and this will come in handy."

The proposition was accepted, and the farmer's son helped put the quarter of beef across Molly's shoulders, and the homeward journey began. The mare was skittish, and the doctor had difficulty in keeping the beef from falling. Finally the mare shied at something, and away went the beef into a big snow-drift.

The doctor was a member of the Methodist church, and, according to his story, did not swear. He dismounted and endeavored to put the beef on the mare, but she wouldn't stand still, and after repeated attempts the task seemed a hopeless one. Thinking of the resolution, the young doctor set his teeth and tried again. This time he was successful. He felt like a conquering hero as he dumped the beef on the porch of his modest home about midnight. The faithful little wife was sure it was a dispensation of Providence, but the doctor, remembering his struggles at the snow-drift, reserved his opinion.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Real Truth.

Some people deceive themselves with the notion that if they have been denied some advantage which another has had the only dignified course for them in life is to ridicule that advantage.

"It is a strange thing to me to discover," said Mr. X. to Mr. Z., "that I have wanted a college education all my life, and never have known it until lately."

"What brought it to your knowledge at last?" asked Mr. Z., smiling.

"I perceived that there was a certain bitterness in the light way in which I always said, 'Well, as for me, I'm heartily glad that I didn't go to college.'—Youth's Companion.

The Trans-Mississippi and International Congress is composed of delegates from every State and Territory West of the Mississippi river. The idea of this exposition originated in that Congress at its session at Omaha in 1895, and the project has become a National enterprise and the National Commission has been organized and is in active service, there being one commissioner for each of the several departments of the Government. Most of the Trans-Mississippi States are well along in the way of gathering exhibits from their respective States and many of them have made liberal appropriations, while others are preparing exhibits through private enterprise.

Vice-President H. B. Maxson of Reno, has made arrangements whereby he can get Nevada exhibits, shipped from any point in the State along the line of the U. P. R., to Omaha and return, and he requests all persons who wish the interests of the State advertised, to co-operate with the Exposition County Commissioner of his county, whose name is shown above, and prepare some product of his county and send it to the nearest point on the C. P. R. from which place it will be sent to Omaha and exhibited, and returned to the same point at the close of the exposition, free of expense to the exhibitor. Full information should accompany everything sent for exhibition. Before sending anything to the line of the railroad a full description should be given. The Exposition Commissioner of the county, who in turn will notify the Vice-President, who will notify him what action to take, otherwise there might be many duplications. Apply to your County Representative for further information, and don't let this opportunity of advertising the resources of Nevada be lost.

Resolved, 'That the people of the island of Cuba are and of right ought to be free and independent.'

ANXIOUSLY AWAITING THE GREAT NAVAL BATTLE.

The people generally throughout the United States are becoming very tired of the re-hash published every day regarding the Spanish fleet and its purported locations and arrivals at various ports. If any of the reports have the least foundation in fact, there is but one conclusion to be drawn, and that is that Sampson and Schley with their respective squadrons are doing considerable unnecessary "fiddling" in southern waters. It is now believed that Admiral Sampson's bombardment of San Juan a few days ago was far from being a victory and many are convinced that it was virtually a defeat and that it was probably decided in official circles, that the less said about the San Juan affair the better. The arrival of the Spanish fleet at Santiago de Cuba yesterday, the news of which is semi-officially confirmed at the Navy Department, would indicate that instead of trying to head off Admiral Cervera as was claimed Sampson has been dodging around the islands in the Caribbean sea, with the evident intention of keeping out of the way of the Spanish war ships.

It is doubtless true that he has been acting under orders from Washington and has, to a great extent, been handicapped by such orders, but it seems to a landsman that he might have construed his orders so as to have come in contact with the fleet of the enemy. Had this occurred he surely would have had the advantage by being near a base of supplies, also in direct communication with the Government, while the enemy, after a long sea voyage and without a coaling station or any chance of reinforcements would have been comparatively helpless after the first brush. Now the fleet has entered a port where it can re-victual and prepare for battle. That some bad management and judgment has been shown, when compared with Dewey's great victory in the Philippines, cannot be doubted. Rear Ad-Sampson may not be to blame, but it is evident that someone is at fault. For weeks the people of this country have watched each day for a decisive blow to be struck in this quarter, but they have waited in vain. The dispatches have said over and over again that within the next twenty-four hours a great sea battle would be fought, but the hours have lengthened into days and the days into weeks, the Cape Verde fleet has been reported in nearly all, if not every quarter of the globe and finally slips right in under the nose of our Key West squadrons and anchors in a Spanish port while the Spaniards shake the red and yellow flag in our faces and jeer and ridicule us.

In the death of Right Hon. William E. Gladstone, England loses one of her greatest public men. At the age of 23 years he began his public career, by entering the House of Commons and from that time on for nearly sixty-six years he has had much to do with England's affairs, and was recognized by all civilized countries as one of the foremost men of the present century. Four different times he was chosen as Prime Minister of England and from which position he resigned in 1894 on account of failing health and increasing years. He nevertheless took a lively interest in the affairs of his country and up to a recent date his opinions in matters of grave importance were solicited and to a great extent followed by acknowledged leaders in England's policy. He was born in 1809 and was at the time of his death in his eighty-ninth year.

And now comes Germany, notwithstanding her protestations of friendship for the United States and the claim of neutrality in the present trouble, and allows one of her war vessels to pass American war ships without extending the usual courtesies to the flag in the form of a salute. It is said that the German war ship Geier passed into the harbor of Havana totally ignoring the United States vessels, although they saluted her as she passed and as if to add insult to injury she dipped her flag to Castle Morro as she steamed along. Is it any wonder that some of the European powers call us ignorant and cowardly Yankees?

Carson has a cigarette club composed entirely of young ladies. The club meets nightly in a private residence near the center of the city, behind locked doors; but whether they drink tea, tell funny stories or discuss love, no mortal man can discover. It is understood, however, that any young man caught by the ladies with a lighted cigarette in his fingers will be given the glass eye and the marble heart for thirty days, for the first offense, and turned down for all time if the offense is repeated. —Genoa Courier.

CONDENSED WAR NOTES.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The Spanish Cape Verde fleet has arrived at Santiago de Cuba without incident.

Admiral Camara, commander of the Cadiz squadron is at Madrid receiving instructions relative to his destination which is expected to be "depends on the requirements of war."

The new Spanish Minister of War is injecting great activity in the campaign, it is also said the minister will also negotiate actively with foreign diplomats to protect Spain against a combination of her enemies.

The success of Admiral Cervera in avoiding the American fleets and keeping them on the alert excited much enthusiasm at Madrid and causes the press to clamor for the prompt dispatch of the reserve fleet to the front.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.—The Charleston is again ready for sea and will sail tomorrow.

HAVANA, May 20.—The relief in this city at the safe arrival of the Spanish fleet is very great as it was feared that the American ships, which left the blockade here had gone to intercept the Spanish fleet. It is now believed that the American fleet fled in order to avoid a reverse.

KEY WEST, May 20.—Events of surpassing interest are expected to develop here within the next twenty-four hours.

Details of the important movements are not permitted to pass the censor.

SALT LAKE, May 20.—Batteries A and B, Utah Volunteers, comprising 250 men, left here this morning for San Francisco. They were given a hearty farewell by the people.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—All the newspaper correspondents at Tampa, Florida, have been notified that in future all dispatches must be placed in the hands of Lieutenant Miles of General Shafter's staff for approval. The censorship will be kept on until after the invasion of Cuba.

PARIS, May 20.—A high official says: "There is certainly a feeling of sympathy towards Spain in the higher circles of society, but it is not general, although some cranks have started public subscriptions for the Spaniards."

MADRID, May 20.—The Minister of Marine is quoted as saying: "I am greatly rejoiced at the safe arrival of the Spanish fleet at Santiago de Cuba. It is an immense triumph for the Spanish navy. The sailors who planned it are worthy of all praise."

Continuing the Minister said he congratulated himself upon the first event happening in his administration arguing so well for the navy and for the country.

MR. HOLLAND, inventor of the submarine boat, offered to send his vessel into Havana harbor by night with his own crew, and throw a dynamite bomb into Morro Castle, on condition that the Government agreed to purchase his boat after he performed this feat, but the civilians of the Navy Department were against it. Why certainly. According to the ideas of those gentlemen, it would be far better to load it on a flat car and send it to the Omaha Exposition to be placed with the Government exhibit. It would be quite an attraction and if precautionary measures were taken to prevent any dynamite bombs from being shipped with it, the Spaniards who might visit the Exposition would not be in any danger.

An Honest Man.

"Now look here, Thompson," remarked Brown. "It has been six months since you borrowed that $5 from me."

"Seven," corrected Thompson gravely.

"Well, then, seven months," mumbled Brown, "and you promised to give it back to me in a week—promised faithfully, you did, to return me it in seven days instead of months."

"I know it," answered Thompson sadly, drawing a memorandum book from his pocket. "That bill was series F, No. 673,929, issue of 1887. I made the note, and then I spent the money. Since then I've been trying to recover it."

"But," howled Brown, "any other would do as well."

"No," responded Thompson, shaking his head. "I'm a man of my word. When you gave me the bill, I said 'I will return this to you,' and I meant it. Brown, old man, just as soon as I come across No. 673,929, series F, issue of 1887, I'll see that you get it, for I am not the one to go back on my promise."

—Editor's Drawer in Harper's Magazine.

No Reason to Hurry.

A pleasant looking, stylishly dressed old lady was boarding a Sixth avenue car, and the "smart Alex" conductor shouted in her ear:

"Hurry up there! Step lively! Be quick!"

He looked as if he were on the point of pushing her bodily inside the car, when, to his great surprise, she stopped short, and looking him full in the face, said: "Young man, it is not worth while to be in such a hurry. You'll get to hell soon enough." —New York Sun.

The Precedent.

She—It seems to me that the earliest records prove that woman has always been ahead of man.

He—How so?

She—Why, one of the first things that Adam said to Eve was, "After you." —Brooklyn Life.

THE LETTER.

The letter my lady wrote to me
I would you could see the lines!
There's a flavor of orange blossoms
And a tangle of jessamine vines.

Oh, the letter my lady wrote to me!
I sat in my room and see
The sails on the ships and her red, sweet Lips.

In the letter she wrote to me,
Oh, the letter my lady wrote to me!
Here is the word she missed,
And here is the word that was never heard
On the line her lips have kissed.

And the letter my lady wrote to me
Close to my heart shall be Till the judgment day, when I drift away, Life of my life, from thee!

—Atlanta Constitution.

The Artist Monet.

Claude Monet, the impressionist artist, who lives in the picturesque village of Giverny, in Normandy, is thus described by a correspondent of the Boston Transcript: "Monet is now a wealthy man, but the house he has enlarged is quite like that of the surrounding peasants; white plaster, with a red tiled roof, narrow and low and long; so long that it is in its length only that it shows its superiority over its neighbors; for his family is large. But though the house itself is simple the glory of it is in its garden, and this is truly superb. Personally he is an interesting looking man of about 60, strong and rugged, the type of a refined peasant, and it is that that his clothes designate him to be, for he wears the big, clumsy wooden sabots of the country, combined with the finest linen, with hemstitched ruffles at neck and wrists."

Navies of the World.

The Army and Navy Year Book rates the navies of the world as follows: 1, Great Britain; 2, France; 3, Russia; 4, Italy; 5, United States; 6, Germany; 7, Spain; 8, Japan; 9, Austria; 10, Netherlands. Under present naval contracts Japan in 1899 will go to the fifth place, crowding down the United States and Germany one point.

The oldest emblem of royalty in existence is the iron crown of the Lombards. The inner strip of iron, according to tradition, was beaten out of one of the nails used at the crucifixion. Its most distinguished wearers have been Charlemagne, Charles V and Napoleon.

A Great Polyglot.

Solomon Caesar Malan habitually conversed with his children in Latin, but on his deathbed, when Solomon, his son, began to recite a psalm in the familiar Vulgate of his youth, the dying man, scholar to the last, muttered, "Non ita, non ita! Hebraice!" so the son repeated it in Hebrew.

He could, for that matter, just as well have said it in Coptic or Chinese, for to him all tongues came naturally. At 18 he could write in 13 languages, oriental and European, and among his published works we find translations from the Arabic, Persian, Syriac, Ethiopic, Hebrew, Coptic, Armenian, Georgian, Mongol, Chinese, Korean, Japanese, Greek, Russian, Welsh and Gothic. He is said to have learned to speak Armenian fluently in a fortnight, and he preached in Georgian to a Georgian congregation in the cathedral of Kutais.

Heat and Fuel Savers.

How long are you going to "get along" with that old cookstove that burns more fuel than a furnace and heats the outdoors more than it does the oven?

A very little money will buy one of our cookstoves—you'll save the price in fuel in one season. It will keep the heat where it ought to be, and cook your food as it ought to be cooked. Come in and examine them.

DEVOURS LIKE FIRE.
THE WONDERFUL EFFECTS PRODUCED BY FLUORINE.

The Diamond Only Able to Absolutely Resist This Powerful Solvent—Researches Into the Nature of a Hitherto Poorly Known Chemical Element.

The alchemists of the middle ages believed that somewhere in the universe was to be found a universal solvent which would dissolve the most refractory substances as readily as water dissolves sugar. They named their solvent liquor alkahest, and what time they could spare from the search after the elixir of life and the philosopher's stone was spent in the endeavor to obtain it. Science has yet to prove, by the way, that there was not more method in the madness of the alchemists than is generally supposed, for in the remarkable substance fluorine chemists possess material that approximates very closely to a universal solvent. Its chemical energy is so fierce that, except gold and platinum, nothing can resist it, and even gold and platinum succumb to fluorine in time. The mere contact of most substances with fluorine is sufficient to cause not mere solution, but light, flame and fierce detonations.
Dull, inert flint takes fire when exposed to fluorine vapor and becomes a brilliant incandescent mass. Lampblack bursts into flame, while charcoal burns with bright scintillations. Only the diamond is able to resist this powerful solvent, to which it does not succumb even at high temperature. The similar element silicon, which can be obtained in a crystalline form closely resembling the diamond, gives a magnificent display in the presence of fluorine, the crystals becoming white hot and throwing showers of fiery spangles in all directions. The heat is so intense that the crystals melt, showing that their temperature has reached 1,200 degrees C.

Phosphorus combines fiercely with fluorine. Frustian blue, on account of the cyanogen it contains, burns with a beautiful pink flame; while from a crystal of iodine placed in fluorine vapor a heavy liquid distills with a pale flame.
This liquid—an iodide of fluorine—etches glass, and if thrown into water hisses like hot iron. The last named metal becomes white hot when exposed to fluorine; even iron rust behaves in a similar manner. Nearly all metals are raised to vivid incandescence in a current of the gas, many appearing very beautiful, especially aluminum and zinc. If the latter be slightly warmed, it bursts into a white flame too dazzling to gaze at or describe.

Although it has been known in various states of combination for many years, having been first discovered by Schwanharder of Nuremberg, in 1670, and rediscovered by Scheele in 1771, fluorine was not obtained as fluorine in the free state until about six years ago, when the French chemist Moissan succeeded in isolating it by employing a current of electricity from 26 or 28 Bousen batteries. The current was passed through the compound of fluorine and hydrogen known as hydrofluoric acid, which is similar to hydrochloric acid. To improve the conductivity of the hydrofluoric acid it was necessary to dissolve another fluorine compound in the liquid. As will readily be imagined, it is not so difficult to obtain free fluorine as to keep it when obtained.
Every part of the apparatus used by M.
Moissan was made of platinum, with screw joints and washers of lead, which swell on contact with fluorine, all the stoppers being of fluor spar. Fluorine has a powerful affinity for silicon, one of the principal constituents of glass, so that it was impossible to use glass vessels or tubes to contain the gas.

As regards the chemical nature of fluorine, it is a gas at ordinary temperature and is the lightest member of the series of elements containing chlorine, bromine and iodine. The attraction of fluorine for hydrogen exceeds that of chlorine and is so great that if a slow current of fluorine gas be passed into a tube of fluor spar containing a drop of water a dark fog is produced, which changes presently to a blue vapor consisting of ozone—the condensed form of oxygen. The last named substance appears to be one of the few materials which has no affinity for fluorine. Nothing is observed to take place between them even when they are heated up to 1,000 degrees F.

So far all experiments had been conducted with fluorine gas, which, at the time it was isolated, resisted all attempts to reduce it to the liquid state.
Six years ago, however, there was no laboratory—such as that at the Royal institution—having powerful machinery for producing liquid air or liquid oxygen at the command of the investigator.
In fact, liquid air itself was practically unknown. By the aid of this weapon Professors Dewar and Moissan have succeeded in liquefying fluorine. At the extremely low temperature of liquid oxygen it was found that fluorine did not attack glass, and it was possible to use glass vessels to hold the newly liqued element.—C. F. Townsend to Knowledge.

Horace Greeley's Eccentric Ideas.
Even his eccentric ideas were made plausible by his treatment. I heard him say once that what was then thought to be the Great American desert ought to be planted with Canada thistles so as to give nature some sort of a green start, when other vegetation might be made to follow. But the trouble is Canada thistles, like any other thing inspired by "pure cussedness," will only grow and thrive where they ought not to.
Find a place where their presence would do some good, and, as in the Humpty Dumpty case, "all the king's horses and all the king's men" could not fasten them there. This perverseness suggests in a certain way the small boys' conception of good and bad—his enchainment of nature and life.

"What's fun," he said, "is always wicked, what we don't want to do is pious."

Mr. Greeley would cut down his alders in the spring. When I mildly suggested to him that our agricultural authorities preferred the autumn for that work, when nature could not so well and their struggle for existence, he thought this reason was a mere excuse for not cutting them at all.—Joel Benton in Harper's Magazine.
